Leopold, according to the doctor, suffered from an "inferiority complex," as a child, being small in stature, sickly, and having been sent for the start of his education to a co-educational institution in which only two of the pupils were boys. This resulted in Rabe being treated

When it came to the Franks case, it was Leopold who used his unusual intelligence to work out details of the plot, in the opinion of the witnesses.

Major-General Sir Archibald Macdonald, K.C.B., C.M.G., P.R.O., President of the Royal Military College, Kingston, arrived in the city yesterday morning, and will be the guest of Major-General Sir A. Macdonald for a week.

Dean E. A. Howard, of the University of Alberta, was one of the speakers at the Irrigation Conference recently held in Calgary.

Mrs. E. C. Farber and her young son Harry, who have been visiting Mrs. Farber's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Howard at Banff, are expected to return to the city today.

Dr. W. A. West, professor of soils of the University of Alberta is in Calgary attending the Irrigation Conference.

Miss Julia Patton is leaving today for Vancouver to be the guest of Miss Frank Smith for a few days.

Miss Mary Kennel will be the guest of Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Smith, who are in the city on a business trip, for the week end.

Mrs. Gerald Bick is leaving early next week for a six weeks trip to the coast.

Miss Jean Mitchell, the Highlands, and Miss J. P. Mitchell of Brandon, are holding at Jasper House, Jasper Park.

Of much interest to Canadians and Americans is the recent announcement of the engagement of Miss Marion Forbes-Robertson, daughter of the distinguished English actor, Mr. John Forbes-Robertson and Lady Forbes-Robertson, to the Hon. Mr. Bruce Robertson-Thomson, son of Viscount Wingham and grandson of the late Sir Bruce Robertson. Viscount Wingham has held many important posts. He was Governor of Bombay for several years and was Governor of Madras.

Lady Drummond Macdonald, who was recently created a Lady of the Order of St. John, Jerusalem, in England, and received an investiture from the King at Buckingham Palace, is one of the few holders of this order outside the United Kingdom. There are two degrees in the Order of St. John, Jerusalem, Lady of the Order.

PIGS OR STARS

Copyright, 1924, by International Feature Service, Great Britain Rights Reserved.

LONG ago, when many of our readers were little boys, an editorial was published based on two famous lines, of which the author is not known:

"Two prisoners looked out from behind their bars;

"One saw the mud, the other saw the stars!"

At that time many were asked what picture they would suggest to illustrate those two lines. An intelligent woman gave this suggestion: "Show two men, sitting in a saloon, looking at an unfortunate woman of the lower type. One, in that poor creature, sees the soul that nothing can destroy. He sees 'the stars,' the spirit that yet will rise above the earth.

"The other man sees only 'the mud,' only what is vile and degraded in the unhappy woman."

"One sees the mud, the other sees the stars."

Today we present a more prosaic illustration of the famous lines. Here are the two prisoners looking out from behind their bars. One looks upward to see what is beautiful in life and in nature. His imagination—both see in their IMAGINATION only—carries him to the mountain tops, through the bars of his prison, and through the window of memory and of hope he sees the clouds the trees, the STARS.

The imagination of the other sees the mud and the wallowing swine.

We can teach our minds to work as we WANT them to work

We can teach them to look on the good side, the hopeful side of life. Or we can allow them to drift into pessimism, gloomy, morbid thoughts, and see only that which is hideous and unworthy.

We are all of us prisoners. We may not be held by the iron bars of a prison nor by the strong hand of drink or drugs. But we are prisoners here within our bodies, destined to serve a certain number of years on this earth before rising to a higher life.

We look from behind "our bars," which are the physical side of life. Too few that look upward see the stars and find hope in them. Many, discouraged, look downward and see only the mud.

One trouble with us is work under high pressure.

We try hard, most of us, while we are at it. Then comes the reaction, which usually takes the form of dejected spirits and pessimistic forebodings.

Many families are made miserable by the morose manner of the heads of families fretting uselessly about the future or chronically gloomy about the present.

Nowhere in the world will you see so many gloomy, preoccupied faces as on this continent. That is a sign of intensity, of hard striving for success.

There Are Too Many Grumpy Faces.

Too Many of Us Look at Life Through Gloomy Spectacles and Try to Make Others Do the Same.

The Purpose of This Editorial Is to Interest Readers in the Possibility of Making Other People Happier BY SEEMING AND BEING HAPPIER THEMSELVES.

We Make Our Troubles Worse by Thinking How Bad They Are.

We Make Them Lighter by Thinking That They Won't Last Long; That Only Courage and Determination Are Required to Put an End to Them.

But it is also a sign of nervous wear and tear, of early breakdown.

Remember that cheerfulness OF ITSELF is a valuable asset

If a doctor looks at his patient and finds a wrinkled, nervous man, with constant frowns and irritation, he knows that the task of effecting a cure will be harder than with a cheerful person. Irritability POISONS the system.

Some people are cheerful and smiling. They push away their troubles, or deny them. In their own phraseology, they say that the things unpleasant "never happened."

We do NOT recommend that style of settling life's problems.

But we DO recommend the habit of refusing to take as final the unpleasant side of life.

Unfortunately, a little knowledge often leads to pessimistic intellectual sourness.

A man READS just enough to know how big humanity's problems are. He THINKS just enough to realize how feeble is the mind of man in proportion to the work before it.

He draws gloomy conclusions for the race, finds life not worth while—declares sometimes that the world must be governed by an evil spirit—and wherever he goes he spreads gloom around him.

He is a human being less admirable than the plantation darkey, singing at his work, smiling over a poor dinner, and genuinely happy over the welcome home of a little darkey baby that cannot hope to be President.

Life IS a big problem, and the achievement even of moderate happiness is NOT easy.

But shall we make things any better by groaning and frowning as we go along, looking down at the mud when the stars are there to inspire us?

Consider the little coral insects that have produced big islands in Southern waters. Those little creatures at their work below the surface set us a good example.

Think of the task which they undertake—without knowing it. For centuries they work lifting the wall of coral slowly from the bed of the sea toward the sunlit surface. Each little hole in the coral is the tomb of one worker. Not one of them ever lives to see a change. But they work and plod along. At last the work is done, the island rises above the sea, the soil is formed, birds bring seeds, palms grow, human beings appear—the little submarine creatures have done their work well.

So it will be with us. We are a sort of coral slowly from the depths of ignorance, savagery, poverty, gradually creating a real civilization, raising it out of selfishness, up toward the sunlight of justice and happiness. It is a long work and a hard work.

BUT WE MIGHT AS WELL BE CHEERFUL ABOUT IT and enjoy the work, instead of making it worse with growling

MAKE yourself cheerful (you CAN if you will) and thus you will benefit yourself and others.

There is no greater handicap to success than a gloomy face. Many a man has made his way quickly simply because men LIKE to see a happy face, and they are glad to help one that faces life pluckily and cheerfully.

The kind of man picked out by a Morgan or a Rockefeller for hard and important work is THE CHEERFUL MAN. They may be types of the gloomy, pessimistic man. For money does not make them happy, and with no one to control them they indulge their tendency to gloom.

BUT THE MEN THAT THEY PICK OUT AS GOOD WORKERS ARE CHEERFUL.

Rockefeller's chosen partners are men who actually MAKE IT A BUSINESS TO BE CHEERFUL. They know from study of life that there is a cash value to the cheerful side, that the man who is always READY, finds nothing TOO hard, will be always in demand.

There is another important side to cheerfulness, and that is its effect upon others. The man who goes home every night with a face irritated and cross is simply ruining the lives of those about him. And, besides, he is often playing the part of a bully and a coward. He inflicts his bad humor on those that cannot defend themselves or injure him.

Everything in this life depends on how we FEEL, not upon what we HAVE. If every one of us would fight the disposition to growl and look on the dark side we should advance enormously. If it did any good to be gloomy this would not be written. But no matter how hard your life or your work is, a sour nature will only make it HARDER.

And a pleasant disposition will help at once to better your conditions.

Usually the gloomy man is one that gives up easily.

In any fight you can easily tell which man is winning. He may be badly battered, perhaps with a black eye and other troubles, but he has a pleasant look through it all, and you can see that he is winning.

A gloomy man, full of gloomy predictions, LOOKS like the losing one, and he IS that—usually. The moment you begin to look "down on your luck" the world changes its estimate of you—you are considered a failure by your own confession.

The world's pessimists are ruining their own chances of advancement, while making life gloomier for those around them.

One of the world's brave men was Robert Louis Stevenson, the admirable writer. That man was really brave, for he was cheerful, worked hard and turned a smiling face to the world—even while he was dying.

He had success, enjoyed his work, everything in life was his, yet he was dying of consumption—and he knew it.

Surely there was a man with reason to complain. He knew the world NEEDED him and his work. He knew that his existence was a blessing and a pleasure to his fellow man. And he knew that within a very short time he must go prematurely to his grave.

In spite of this Stevenson was one of the most cheerful of men. He wrote his own beautiful epitaph carved on the stone on the South Sea Island hill that he chose for his burial place.

He lived a brave man, doing his best and smiling in the face of a very cruel fate—and he died a brave, hopeful and smiling man.

We recommend to you a prayer by Robert Louis Stevenson. Out it out when you throw away the rest of this newspaper—read it over once in a while.

"The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties.

"Help us to play the man, help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry.

"Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds weary and content and unshowered, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep. Amen."

You are here, prisoner of this big earth and of this life of hard work, for a certain time. As you look out from "behind your bars" toward the life to come, LOOK AT THE STARS—not at the mud.

The mud of today will be dry and forgotten tomorrow. The stars, which represent Divine Power and Justice, last forever.

Look upward. Believe that Wisdom and Justice, that have guided this earth and all its people for so long, intend in the end that we shall find happiness and a full reward for honest effort.

Early interest in new autumn hats prompts the showing of this all-round tailored model with new square crown of felt, ribbon and felt trimmed, and with bound brim

No season's outfit is complete without a smart knitted vest of either silk or wool

Absolutely correct togs for the rougher sports and recreations are a real essential since comfort and necessary protection are features that must not be disregarded

THE trend of fashion toward the severely tailored suit and dress demands footwear in keeping with this mode, hence the return of the mannish oxford. This causes no little satisfaction, since the fanciful slippers and strapped pumps that have so long been the vogue have without question palled upon the women who desire to be smartly yet at all times consistently dressed. There is no question about the daintiness and beauty of the sandal slipper and its many variations, but it does seem that the limit in femininity has long since been reached, and the vogue has been carried far in the acceptance of the fancy sandal for practically all costumes.

Appropriateness is, or should be, a big factor in determining claims to smartness of appearance, yet there can easily be recalled an almost utter disregard for fitness in the shoe trend of the past year or more. The one who has seemed to be a search for the most ornate and fanciful footwear for all occasions and with all attire. The practical oxford with its splendid appearance of serviceability is, however, according to the latest dictation of fashion, more or less closely related to the fanciful slipper or strap-pump. In many instances this new shoe is developed in a combination of materials as, for instance, suede and kid, or suede and patent-leather. This return of the oxford must not be taken as evidence of the exit of the fancifully cut and highly decorative footwear of the moment. It is rather evidence that consistency is at last entering into the realm of footwear in that the oxford will be selected for general wear and the lighter and dressier models for evening and dress-up occasions.

RELEGATING certain articles of attire to their proper place in a woman's wardrobe and for wear on certain occasions is today a difficult and discouraging process. Women quite generally are inclined to disregard all established rules of dress, and wear what personal fancy dictates.

When you stop to analyze the reason for this breaking down of accepted rules of correct dress, you see the reaction from wartime restrictions. But the pendulum is slowly but surely swinging in the other direction. Extravagance in dress has subsided considerably as is evidenced by the very noticeable increased interest in home sewing.

The re-entrance into the cast of fashion's play of the tailored vogue is additional evidence that practicability is being more and more considered. What is true of footwear is equally true of other accessories of dress and, in fact, of dress itself since the tailored suit, so long relegated to obscurity and with no consistent substitute is again filling its quite definitely individual place in woman's attire.

With interest and pleasurable anticipation women generally look first, at the beginning of a new season to the new millinery and even as early as this advance hat fashions are accessible, particularly the semi-dressy, all-around hats of fabric though this year the hat of felt ranks high as an acceptable first hat choice of the season.

It is interesting to note that many of the new hats are quite obviously designed for the men and the women who have not bobbed their hair, and it will be still more interesting to look for the effect, if any, that such decided lines in millinery will have upon the present vogue of short tresses.

Will there be a decided movement toward longer locks, toward more elaborately dressed coiffures, or will the continuance of the bobbed-hair vogue force still another change in millinery modes? Time alone would seem to hold the answer to this all-compelling question.

Though for some time past we may have not erred in the matter of correct attire for the rougher sports and recreations.

Stylish, however, rather than appreciation of the value of practicability and comfort, has in many incidences been the dominating influence that prompted the choosing and wearing of really suitable clothes.

Funny, isn't it, the perverseness of human nature? Had knickers and mannish shirts and their related accessories been advanced on the lines of practical suitability rather than as a daring new fashion, it is safe to say that such highly desirable outfits as are pictured today would never have enjoyed the vogue that has lately placed this attire among the essentials of the complete wardrobe for any season.

The practical oxford is related to the more fanciful slipper or strap pump

How public opinion in dress changes is convincingly demonstrated in the general acceptance today of the knicker suit, when compared with the storm of protest that resulted in making it so difficult several years ago for Mr. Harry Walker to forswear petticoats and skirts and dress her very frail and feminine body in man's regulation attire. When you recall the modes during and after the Civil War you are inclined to marvel that there were not more women with the courage of Mary Walker, and of Mrs. Bloomer, too, and no man or woman with more designing ability than that shown by Mrs. Bloomer.

Still, the utter lack at that time of such practical clothes as knicker suits but substantiates the understanding of fashions that holds to the theory that fashions are expression of the trend of national and international affairs.

The emancipation of women had not yet formulated into an idea, woman's real place in the world was at best only a dream, a vague ideal; the whole progress of the ideal into the idea is punctuated by fashions that expressed the trend of human affairs until now women are not only free socially and politically, but enjoy a liberty in dress that is delightful and beautiful, and a just reward for courage, initiative and a cheerful acceptance of outside-the-home responsibilities.

Linen crash is ideal for the summer riding habit and a mannish shirt of tub silk and a Leghorn roll-brim sailor hat are smart accessories
